Yugoslavia: a state that withered away. Carrington's plan realized that Yugoslavia was in a state of dissolution and decided that each republic must accept the inevitable independence of the others, along with a promise to Serbian President Milošević that the would ensure that Serbs outside of Serbia would be protected. Each television center created its own programming independently, and some of them operated several channels.

Breakup of Yugoslavia

Economic growth was curbed due to Western trade barriers combined with the. Carington responded by putting the issue to a vote in which all the other republics, including Montenegro under , initially agreed to the plan that would dissolve Yugoslavia. Invasion appeared imminent, as Soviet
