The pile of 98k rifles and M38 gasmaskenbüchse gas mask cans was tasked to the UK for final disposition, but the overstretched British military in 1945 did not fully accomplish this, and a lot of ex-German weaponry fought again in the Greek civil war.

The Secret Shadow Government

This is an aviation term used to define something flying around in the skies that for whatever reason cannot be identified. This was confirmed by a letter from Colonel R H Forsyth, Project Manager Infantry Weapons, Procurement Executive, MoD dated 28 September 1992 in response to Datestyle's letter to the Secretary of State for Defence dated 2 September 1992 merely repeating the official line that despite some initial teething problems, the Armed Forces were very happy with the weapon that met all their operational requirements and so further evaluation of the muzzle stabiliser was pointless. It was not emptied out until the late 1940s.

He specifically mentioned vehicle engines. IJN Ise sank in very shallow water at Ondo Seto near Kure, gutted and nearly splitting in half at the forward edge of the flight deck, and on a 15° starboard list.
