Alvin Plantinga, Where the Conflict Really Lies: Science, Religion, & Naturalism

Darwinism is a much better atheodicy than a theodicy for several reasons, but here I will simply point out that Plantinga can't consistently raise this objection if he is skeptical about Darwinism and if that skepticism is based in large part on his theism, for that commits him to the view that Darwinism is more likely to be true given naturalism than given theism, which is itself a reason to prefer a naturalistic Darwinian account of the facts of evil to a theistic Darwinian account. His theme in this short book is that the conflict between science and theistic religion is actually superficial, and that at a deeper level they are in concord.

Yes, there is a war between science and religion

I do not recommend this to anyone.

Why Science Is Not in Conflict with Religion

The eye alone is so intricate as to render it totally improbable that it could have come into being by happenstance. I don't understand why this book needed to include these sections. For example, would not the existence of intelligent moral beings be more likely given theism than naturalism? Not only do they not exist, but promoting such conflict actually hurts science: As a result, declarations by Dawkins, Dennett, and others have at least two unhappy results.

5 Conflicts Between Science and Religion

I had heard from many sources that it was one of, if not the best, apologetics books of the 21st Century.
