The Captain then ran to his cabin and brought out his sword, and with a terrific blow he cut the mill in halves; but each piece formed itself into a mill, and both mills continued grinding until the ship sank to the bottom of the sea, where the mills are still grinding in the terrible Swallow of Stroma, and that is why the water in the sea is salt! But there was less fear in this isolated corner of the kingdom than in any other diocese of a recrudescence of the ancient solemnity in the church service. We afterwards learned we had been recognised by a gentleman who had met us on the previous day. Attempts to trace the course pursued by the fugitives, who carried the sacred burden, have been often made.
