Laumeier Sculpture Park

Instead she wanted features such as a formal garden, a conservatory building, and plantings to fit the trees and meadows at the site. Due to its prominence, it has become symbolic of the park.

Laumeier Project by Jackie Ferrara

Benjamin de Foy, faculty in the Department of Earth and Atmospheric Science at St. Hunt is particularly interested in how public art can be responsive to the dynamics of community. Such controversy is typical when dealing with public art in general and almost guaranteed when dealing modern-contemporary art.
