A fortune awaits the man who finds it, because at present these mines are worthless.

Rhodesia #225 (1966)

What we are here doing, what we have been doing in Central Africa, is not to wait for the ripe fruit to fall from the tree.

Rhodesia

I have no doubt myself that, if we leave Central Africa to manage its own affairs, the Africans, black and white, will manage them just as well as, if not better than, we can from a distance of 6,000 miles. White Liberals, Moderates, and Radicals in Rhodesia, 1953—1980 Croom Helm, Sydney, Australia, 1984. It is a very real danger in the extremely anomalous position which arises from the form of Constitution adopted in Central Africa.

RANA

The mother is present, leaning on an axe if the child is a male and on a hoe if female.
