R CRJ 491 Honors: Topical Senior Research 3 This course is the second in a two-semester sequence of courses required to fulfill the requirements of the honors program in criminal justice.

Criminal Justice Research Methods

R CRJ 320 Problem Oriented Policing 3 This course reviews the history of problem oriented policing POP and its role as a modern policing strategy in America and internationally. Then, some of the logical and inferential issues that arise when researchers work with quantitative data are described. T CRJ 201 is the Honors College version of R CRJ 201.

The Importance Of Research And Analysis In Policing

T CRJ 401 Crime Deviation and Conformity 3 Crime and criminal behavior is viewed as one of the many forms of deviation from political, moral and conduct norms of the majority culture. During the first meeting of a research methods or criminal justice analysis class, I always ask the students about their preliminary impressions of the course and its relation to the field.

Quantitative Criminology

R CRJ 411 The Community and Corrections 3 Examines the relationship between the community and the correctional system, focusing on the relationships between prisons and the community as well as community-based alternatives to incarceration.

Topics may vary from semester to semester. Backed by research and supported by technological innovations developed at Harvard University, this process of learning through collaborative annotation keeps your students engaged and makes teaching easier and more effective. In turn, these assessments can be used to modify and improve policing strategies in your agency and similar agencies facing the same types of problems.

Introduction to Criminal Justice Research Methods: An Applied Approach

This course examines these issues through an examination of social scientific research on the use and abuse of police authority and the organizational, programmatic, and environmental forces that shape police performance. Proper Conduct of Critical Inquiry. R CRJ 302 Punishment and Corrections 3 Interdisciplinary review of the history of criminal punishment, analyzing the main changes that have occurred and their causes.

Qualitative Approaches to Criminal Justice

The course shows that terrorism is but another form of crime and can, for the most part, be treated by police as a problem to be solved just like any other crime, such as bank robberies, burglaries or murders. Life History and Case Studies. Major Types of Unobtrusive Methods.
