Parliamentary Papers

This mindset was referenced by : Ulster Unionists, fearful of being isolated on the island, built a solid house, but it was a cold house for Catholics. However, I am not an extreme nationalist and, as such, there are two ways in which I can achieve the changes in policing that are necessary for me to give my allegiance not only to policing in Northern Ireland but to the institutions of the state.

Public Information Online (PIO)

In recent recruitment rounds, that progress has not been satisfactory, as I have said.

5 Mar 1997: House of Commons debates

If the Government pursue those discussions and conversations on a realistic basis, they will have our full support. Gentleman accepts the position of the Government—these are the changes that the SDLP has been pushing for, and the Bill is part of the bargain that has been done between the Government and the SDLP, so it is hardly news that the SDLP is happy with the situation.
