Does smiling make you happy, or does being happy make you smile? For example, if a person goes on a romantic date and perceives this date as positive, they might feel happiness, joy, giddiness, excitement, or anticipation because they have appraised this event as one that could have positive effects. We model one such emotion, resentment, as a tertiary emotion.

Theories of Emotion

While primary emotions have clearly defined valences, this theory shows that complex emotions obey no algebraic law and that all emotions have both creative and destructive potentialities. To address these limitations, other theories—such as the Cannon—Bard theory—have been developed.

12.1: Social Emotional Theories of Development

Anger and its opposite, fear, are the positive and negative adaptive reactions to the existential problem of social hierarchy and associated competition for resources and opportunities.

There was one drug that the doctors thought might save her. Failure to master these tasks leads to feelings of inadequacy. This theory still asserts that our emotions are determined by our appraisal of the stimulus, but it suggests that immediate, unconscious appraisals mediate between the stimulus and the emotional response.

This neurocognitive sociology of the emotions supersedes the major theoretical perspectives developed in the sociology of emotions by showing primary emotions to be adaptive reactions to fundamental problems of life which have evolved into elementary social relationships and which can predict occurrences of the entire spectrum of primary, complex secondary, and tertiary emotions. Research has shown that this may stem from an inability to identify facial expressions and other nonverbal expressions of emotion.
