If higher education wants to help disadvantaged students, it must show up (opinion)

This NCHE brief provides a better understanding of unaccompanied homeless youth and the educational and other challenges they face, a summary of federal education legislation that gives unaccompanied homeless youth access to important educational supports, and samples of promising practices implemented by high schools, colleges, and universities to assist unaccompanied homeless youth in succeeding in college. Part-Time Study Educational Opportunity Program support is primarily for full-time students; however, circumstances may make part-time study necessary for individual students for some period of time. Part-time study is automatically authorized for students requiring less than a full-time course load to meet graduation requirements.

Higher Education and the Opportunity Gap

The campus should assist students with discretionary funds and excessive loans should be avoided, particularly in the first year. Getting ahead or losing ground: Economic mobility in America. President Clinton and Vice President Gore created the E-rate and the Technology Literacy Challenge Fund to help connect every school to the Internet, increase the number of multimedia computers in the classroom and provide technology training for teachers.

Inclusion in the 15 percent category or the existence of other factors that mitigate income has no bearing on the need to establish educational eligibility. Campus Support Because Educational Opportunity Program funds are limited in quantity and purpose, the provision of campus-based resources to supplement Educational Opportunity Program funding is essential to the viability of the program.

Extended Opportunity Programs and Services

The board is advised by the director of HEOP and has its own budget for executing various activities. HEOP has provided more than 50 years of access, advocacy, and academic support for educationally and financially deserving New York state residents who have the ability to succeed at independent colleges such as RIT. Finally, in 1969 the state established the Higher Education Opportunity Program HEOP to serve disadvantaged students in the independent colleges and universities of New York state.
