ICO survey shows most UK citizens don't trust organisations with their data

Over half of contributors said they had experienced or been diagnosed with anxiety, and 44% with depression. Such practical knowledge is perhaps the most valuable source of guidance to those new or less well informed on the topic in question. Other statistics from the ICO survey show British adults are broadly unfamiliar with the specifics of how their personal data is being used by companies and organisations in the UK, with only one in ten 10% saying they have a good understanding of how their personal data is used.
