Cohabitation

Although these differences have become less pronounced with the increase in cohabitation and could thus eventually vanish, the following characteristics define the essential boundaries between cohabitation and marriage. The reasons why people get married and the reasons they move in with a partner differ in some key ways. Most married and cohabiting adults cite love and companionship as major reasons why they decided to get married or move in with a partner. Due to the small size of these groups, our ability to draw comparisons between those in same-sex and opposite-sex relationships is limited.
