Alison Adam, Artificial Knowing: Gender and the Thinking Machine

I found Adam's feminist perspective on AI development refreshing and a much needed voice as we push ahead with developing this technology. The examples are dated in the sense that current AI is working far more with neural networks and statistical methods rather than formal abstractions of thinking.

Adam also shows how gender bias is programmed into AI-based systems using theories based on feminism. Tech is great, but sometimes we have. Alison Adam offers a valuable and thought provoking argument about the development of AI: that for the most part it's being developed by men who unknowingly infuse their particular perspectives into their coding.

Alison Adam, Artificial Knowing: Gender and the Thinking Machine

Tech is great, but sometimes we have to stop and ask ourselves, as Alison Adam has here, whose tech is this and whose interests does it serve? Drawing from theories by Donna Haraway and Sherry Turkle, and using tools of feminist epistemology, Adam provides a sustained critique of AI which interestingly re-enforces many of the traditional criticisms of the AI project. Work, Employment and Society analyses all forms of work and their relation to wider social processes and structures, and to quality of life.
