Are you curious about the field of cyber security? In the Tudor court it was best to see nothing, hear nothing, and say nothing. Hacking into devices such as IP phones is also done in order to eavesdrop on the owner of the phone by remotely activating the speaker phone function. For there is no authority except from God, and those that exist have been instituted by God.

What Does the Bible Say About Eavesdropping?

It has not always been clear to what extent some legitimate apps, like Microsoft's Cortana, gather information about what you're saying, leading to genuine privacy concerns.

Building More Secure Networks Another important duty for cyber security experts is to build digital networks for their companies that are capable of withstanding attacks from hackers and are immune to attempts at digital eavesdropping. Another popular eavesdropping method is data sniffing. A host of firewalls and anti-virus software are used by security experts to make sure all the information that travels between the network's nodal points does not lie exposed before hackers who may have accessed a particular port. In those Tudor Times of intrigue and unrest, where traitorous words could result in hanging, drawing, and quartering, or if you were lucky, just losing your head, these eavesdroppers were a grim reminder that you were always being watched and heard by courtiers and servants. Sometimes you don't realize your microphone is on -- you may even think you switched it off -- and sometimes people are listening in for questionable purposes.

It's also reportedly possible in some circumstances for headphones and even speakers to be used to collect conversation, even when a microphone is turned off or disconnected. If the motion is granted, the contents of the overheard or recorded communication, conversation or discussion or evidence derived therefrom, may not be received in evidence in any trial, hearing or proceeding. Then there are programs like speech-to-text, voice recognition software, and apps that let you instruct them instead of using your keyboard.
