Housing

The bedrock underlying Birmingham was mostly laid down during the Permian and Triassic periods.

Local urban regeneration initiatives: Birmingham 'heartlands'

Birmingham is a snowy city relative to other large UK conurbations, due to its inland location and comparatively high elevation. The number of responses was brilliant and input from the people who live in the area has provided invaluable insight to help guide the principles of development in the area.

From the summer of 1940 to the spring of 1943, Birmingham was bombed heavily by the German Luftwaffe in what is known as the Birmingham Blitz.

Housing

The city is a major international commercial centre and an important transport, retail, events and conference hub.

Housing

A market town of in the medieval period, Birmingham grew in the 18th-century Midlands Enlightenment and subsequent Industrial Revolution, which saw advances in science, technology, and economic development, producing a series of innovations that laid many of the foundations of modern industrial society. The East Prospect of Birmingham 1732, engraving by William Westley By the time of the English Civil War Birmingham's booming economy, its expanding population, and its resulting high levels of social mobility and cultural pluralism, had seen it develop new social structures very different from those of more established areas. Six men were convicted, who became known later as the Birmingham Six and sentenced to life imprisonment, who were acquitted after 16 years by the Court of Appeal.

Housing

Freeing for the first time the manufacturing capacity of human society from the limited availability of hand, water and animal power, this was arguably the pivotal moment of the entire industrial revolution and a key factor in the worldwide increases in productivity over the following century.

Housing

Birmingham City Council officers will be in attendance to provide further information to residents and business owners and to hear ideas from the community about the process moving forwards.
