India

He is the author of: Pakistan has warned India directly about further attacks and implied that the situation could lead to a nuclear confrontation.

Looming behind the India

Adding to the conundrum are Indian and Pakistani force modernization and investments in destabilizing platforms and postures. It gives Pakistan more conventional strike options: In addition to its role as a possible nuclear weapon carrier, the Babur-3, even in limited numbers, can be used to strike vital coastal targets with conventional warheads.

Nuclear Weapons and Conflict Transformation by Saira Khan

This comes a day after India carried out airstrikes inside Pakistan for the first time since 1971. Taliban-linked groups have successfully attacked tightly guarded government and military targets in the country.
