Tom DeWeese

Arguably, from a research perspective, what is missing from accounts of educational research in West and Central Africa is a set of Country Research Profiles, each represented by a compendium of Case-histories of research activities in Education undertaken in that country, over a designated period of time. We also believe that development policies should include national population programmes aiming at a satisfactory balance between population and resources and making family planning freely available.

Brandt Report

Mutual cooperation and trade between developing countries must also be encouraged. Bonn, Germany: Fairtrade Labeling Organizations International. Schafer, Jessica, Paul Haslam, and Pierre Beaudet.

Brandt Report

Staggered sales should also be undertaken and accruing profits of such sales should also be used as interest subsidy on loans to low-income developing countries.

Wales for Africa: The 'Fourth Pillar' of Development Cooperation in Action?

Most Brazilian tribes are protected under law, while in reality there has been resistance in policies and strong support for enterprises that carry out these threats on their existence. Food aid should be increased and linked to employment promotion and agricultural programmes and projects without weakening incentives to food production. In short, the term global South might be ambiguous and vague, but I embrace it.
