In any case, given the evidence uncovered in the course of the dispute I think it would be worthwhile to source the claims made in the statement, and any other claims in the article as a whole corroborated by the sources. I can't say I grew up in sight of it, but it was only a few miles up the road.

Stephen Wade, In My Own Shire Region and Belonging in British Writing, 1840

It is a subjective statement that I am objecting too, it is certainly not neutral. Surely someone can provide more verifiable references than this.
