Of Time and Space and Other Things

Compare these lengths with that of 400 tropical years, which comes to 146,096. For accurate location one needs a gridwork of lines—a set of north-south lines as well as east-west ones. For instance, if one wishes to place somewhere on the conceptual tree, one must presumably find a place for it under some concept such as or.

And finally, how do these various issues intersect with one another? If we are considering an empirical, singular, immediate representation, we can easily understand that in cases of ordinary perception, we can e. To determine such matters, accurate time pieces were necessary; timepieces that could be relied on to maintain synchronization to within fractions of a minute over long periods while separated by long distance; and to remain in synchronization with the Earth's rotation, too.

Through Time and Space

We can then see the first two arguments in the Metaphysical Exposition as attempting to undermine 1, and the second two arguments as attempting to undermine 2. In other words, if crops were planted at a particular time of the year and all went well, then, if twelve months were counted from the first planting and crops were planted again, all would again go well. In Europe, however, the sun at midday always fell short of the overhead point.
