FAQ

Remnants of the pre-glacial landscape include the broad, sweeping plateaux which epitomise the Cairngorms, with their dome-shaped summits, sometimes capped with tors, and shallow river valleys such as Coire Domhain and the valleys of the Feith Buidhe and Caochan Dubh between Cairn Gorm and Ben Macdui. Sadly there is a mindset at all levels that Cairngorm can only ever be a liability, this is simply not the case as we hope to prove through realistic business cases and planning as the process moves forward, and if some of the proposals did prove to be uneconomical we would alter or abandon them.

The Cairngorms National Park wildlife sink hole

Copyright Will Boyd Wallis 10 Most land within the Park is owned and managed by private individuals or businesses. In Northern Ireland the national park debate is not only about reconciling environmental and economic interests but also political and ethno-national differences. Hopefully another area in which the Scottish Government can lead the way.

Evolving national park models: The emergence of an economic imperative and its effect on the contested nature of the 'national' park concept in Northern Ireland

Now all the talk is about a replacement subsidy system for public goods such as tree planting, natural flood management and support for nature and access more generally. The CNPA provides leadership to all those involved in the Cairngorms and works in partnership with a range of communities, businesses, non government organisations and public sector partners to deliver practical solutions on the ground.

Landowners above the law (2)

Lying within the Cairngorms National Park, overlooking the March Pool on a bend in the river Spey, famous for its salmon fishing, this is an idyllic spot to lay a loved one to rest. Yes, indeed, it means the red rounded hills, the name that the area we now know as the Cairngorms was historically called.

Sustainability and the multifunctional landscape: An assessment of approaches to planning and management in the Cairngorms National Park

While of limited impact on views from the summit plateau ... Forestry Commission Scotland is urging people to follow instructions on site signage around Bennachie as work gets underway to clear windblown trees. Its therefore extremely unlikely to take compulsory enforcement action against them. How much money will you make from this? Unfortunately the CNPA through its current approach is, I believe, inadvertently creating the very environment which causes the problems it professes to want to address.
