Education, being a planned and purposeful activity, has manifold aims. The role of teacher is extremely volatile which is always on the move try to imbibe the newer methods of teaching and learning, yet retaining what is essential, perennial in the method. We can explain the meaningfulness of words in terms of thoughts, but then how do we explain the meaningfulness of the thoughts themselves? Unfortunately I won't be taking any more philosophy courses in college.

EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM: PHILOSOPHICAL BACKGROUND OF MODERN EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM

Without understanding, there can be no thought. But there are two putative properties of minds—especially human minds—that appear to be recalcitrant to physicalist explanations. Broadly speaking, modern education lacks a unified purpose or goal to direct its curricular and pedagogical commitments.

EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM: PHILOSOPHICAL BACKGROUND OF MODERN EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM

This is what is called the other minds reply to the Chinese room argument. You may not know this about yourself, but you are a philosopher.
