She takes the name of her adopted father, M. He remembers having a similar snack as a child with his invalid aunt Léonie, and it leads to more memories of Combray.

Maurice Bardèche

The novel began to take shape in 1909. He wrote in lined notebooks, with double-lined red margins, where you sometimes find the absent-minded doodling of the author; at other times, he seems to be elaborating on the things he has set down.
