Donald Bradman

The story of a self-taught 22-year-old from the bush who set a series of records against the old rival made Bradman a national hero. The constant glare of celebrity and the tribulations of the season forced Bradman to reappraise his life outside the game and to seek a career away from his cricketing fame. .

The Ten: Unpopular Captains

Recalled for the Third Test at the , Bradman scored 79 and 112 to become the youngest player to make a Test century, although the match was still lost.
