We present a new estimation and segmentation procedure on images provided by a high resolution sonar. Consulted with local industry on chemical waste concerns, toxicity, industrial processing and related, various dates. Using a combination of spatial distribution analyses of volcanic centers within monogenetic volcanic fields and analogue modelling of dike propagation within a fractured elastic medium, I tested the role of the stress field and pre-existing crustal fractures acting on dike propagation and thus on the development and evolution of monogenetic volcanic fields.
