To some tastes her canvases may teeter on the edge of mawkish sentiment — especially some of the figurative work when seen in isolation — but if you look deeper and across her whole output, there is an almost Blakean wonder going on here that offers a timeless window into the beauty of the natural world. The condition report for the lot may make reference to particular imperfections of the lot but you should note that the lot may have other faults not expressly referred to in the condition report for the lot or shown in the online images of the lot. Certain images of the lot provided online may not accurately reflect the actual condition of the lot.

Mary NEWCOMB (1922

She took a degree in Natural Sciences at Reading University in 1943 and went on to teach science and mathematics at the high school in Bath. Becoming an artist in her own right would have looked unlikely to anyone else.

Mary Newcomb was a self-taught British painter known for her depictions of pastoral scenes in the Norfolk countryside. Those drawings were an aide-memoire, possibly later transformed into large paintings she liked to give those drawings to appreciative friends.
