Later, the stockyards were moved to the southwestern part of the city, near what is now Midway Airport. What is not widely appreciated is that the tertiary sector's share for the region had already grown to nearly 60 percent in 1930 and hardly changed until the decade of the 1970s. .

Survey of London

The principal employers in the tertiary sector were wholesale trade, finance and real estate, and railroad services. Scandinavia and the Netherlands joined the industrial parade seriously only after 1850.

Immigrants, Cities, and Disease

Settlement and Population Dynamics For centuries, Native Americans lived at low population densities near the point where the small Chicago River empties into Lake Michigan, within a kilometer of what is now the center of Chicago's business district. The first automobile was a century away and even going ten miles by horse took most of the day.
