WW2

Stephanie Blythe sang with more gravitas and depth than she's done in years, but the ludicrous costume and throne destroyed her credibility. So much for the excuse that the at the ENO was acceptable because the piece isn't often staged. And it's his music, not some irrelevance that gets in the way of what's happening on stage.

In 1986 he was appointed Artistic Director and Composer-in-Residence to the Northern Chamber Orchestra.

WW2

The first He 111 exploded. Some of her vocal techniques will be a matter of taste, such as the placement of the voice more or less on the palate and a somewhat stiff top, especially at forte. I'm fairly ambivalent towards rap myself--I could take it or leave it--but it always amazes me that there are those who will try to explain someone else's dislike of rap in terms meant to be offensive to the person who dislikes it, perhaps in the wild hope that they'll suddenly change their opinion in order to become more Politically Correct.
