

Domestic and international integration of the London money market, 1731-89

Economic Growth Institute, State University of New York at Binghamton - The Internationalization of Money and Finance and the Globalization of Financial Markets

Growth of cross border financial flows

- Parallel to trade, in the world war period and especially after the 70s there has been an enormous growth in cross border financial flows of all kinds: foreign investment in the money market (e.g. interbank market), the bond market, the stock market and the real estate market.
- The importance of foreign investment may overshadow that of domestic investments and investors (for instance the role of foreign investors is of crucial importance for the successful sales of US Treasury bills as well as Italian BOTs)
- There has been an explosion of internationally oriented financial products such as mutual funds, which can be globally or regionally diversified or focused on a single foreign country market.
- Fig. 1.1 Since the mid-70s Americans have increased their investments abroad by more than 10 times while non-US investors have increased their interest in US assets by 20 times.
- The US moved from being the largest net creditor to the largest net debtor in only a quarter of a century.
- Both advanced, emerging and developing economies are nowadays strictly dependent on foreign financing.
