Rheumatology Case Reports

The occurrence of chronic iridocyclitis is virtually limited to a group of patients with early childhood onset of pauciarticular arthritis and frequent occurrence of antinuclear antibodies. Although we now recognize that about 20% of cases of lupus begin during childhood years, childhood lupus was rarely described before the 1950s. A week later Hench gave the Heberden oration, not mentioning this success.

Rheumatology

Juvenile rheumatoid arthritis is now accepted as a syndrome of chronic arthritis with several different subgroups that probably represent different diseases.
