Regional industrial management (1957

As a consequence, these peasants lacked clearly defined criteria which they could easily use to distinguish themselves from the Russians.

Regional industrial management (1957

Now urban growth and urbanization did not equal Russification. They quickly perceived that the conflict between themselves and these strangers was a struggle to control the food they grew.

Regional industrial management (1957

Most of what little support emerged came from urbanized Russians. As a result, managers began to secure their employees from more distant areas, especially neighboring Russian gubernias. Although Ukrainian had been prohibited from 1876 through 1905, no amends were to be made for tsarist policy, for the Soviet order did not bear the responsibility for tsarist injustices.
