The Purgatory of Dante Alighieri (1894 edition)

The water that you see does not spring from a vein that vapor—cold—condensed—restores, like rivers that acquire or lose their force; it issues from a pure and changeless fountain, which by the will of God regains as much as, on two sides, it pours and it divides.

Purgatorio 28

Then by her love we implore thee, let us pass Through thy seven regions; for which, best thanks I for thy favour will to her return, If mention there below thou not disdain. After my eyes took leave of those four stars, turning a little toward the other pole, from which the Wain had disappeared by now, I saw a solitary patriarch near me—his aspect worthy of such reverence that even son to father owes no more. Heaven appeared to revel in their flames: o northern hemisphere, because you were denied that sight, you are a widower! And, again, as in Inferno 26.

Purgatorio 1

The seven rounds of Purgatory, in which the seven capital sins are punished.

Purgatory. Canto I. Dante Alighieri. 1909

Dante's second night's sleep occurs while the poets are on this terrace, and Dante dreams shortly before Tuesday's dawn of a , symbol of disordered or excessive love represented by , and. Then, as before I told, I was despatchd To work his rescue; and no way remaind Save this which I have taen.
