They often contain press releases, fact sheets, articles or pamphlets, a detailed report, ministerial cover letter and other communication materials to provide knowledge on a subject to stakeholders and other interested parties. This allows time for busy people to fit it into their schedules. It is time saving and more effective as the members of the panel previously agreed to be consulted on a regular basis about public service issues.

Moreover, if the stakeholders are broad or the specific users are unknown to the agency, direct advertising may be more difficult. Pre-testing your messages with the target group will help to ensure relevance. If organizers inadvertently allow a community map to be taken over by a limited number of local stakeholders, the results may be considerably less meaningful or acceptable to the rest of the community.
