It turned out that Martin had arranged for me to be summoned to ITV to appear on the ITN lunchtime news at 1. Of the importance of such Provisional Battalions, I believe the advantage to begin with of being relieved from the encumbrance of a long train of recruits, when ordered to move according to the demands of the Service, and to the recruits themselves of not being interfered with in their drill by frequent changes of quarters, cannot be overestimated, and I look to the establishment of local connection between Regiments and Districts as most useful, both as regards recruiting in the first instance, and the formation of a Reserve of discharged men in the second. Cheering as they went, they bayoneted hundreds of the flying enemy.
