. Opinion A non-binding instrument on a specific issue that can be issued from three of the institutions Commission, Council and Parliament, or from the consultative Committee of the Regions and European Economic and Social Affairs Committee. These included support measures such as direct grants, loans, guarantees, and tax benefits.

Understanding EU Policy Making

For this reason, a distinction is usually made between the more structural, long-term, and normatively-oriented policy for the creation and shaping of an economic order and economic constitution — which essentially maps and concretises the decision of a community on its economic system — and the more short- to medium-term economic process policy, which is primarily determined by the day-to-day political decisions of the government. The European Commission had specified the provisions of Article 23 of the Regulation on European Structural and Investment Funds ESI Regulation in guidelines.

These are often referred to as the 'mandate' and set out what the Commission should achieve in the agreement. With the help of the European Semester, the Commission defines the policies of the member states.

SAGE Books

The implementation record of the CSRs within the framework of the European Semester shows again and again that the regulation of the exchange of goods in the internal market largely works; but in the areas of the freedom of services and the free movement of persons, national reservations about European regulation are frequently articulated. There are considerable differences both in terms of their binding force under primary law and in terms of the political and legal instruments available to the EU and its institutions. It does not rank priorities or distinguish between more important from less urgent CSRs.
