Despite these flaws the book is a must have for all enthusiasts of Baumann and the art of the woodcut.

Gustave Baumann

The wooden gates and low fence enclosing a small front yard are original. In the mid-1940s he spent two years carving areredos for The Church of the Holy Faith.

Those who want richer information on the life of the artist will need to look elsewhere but the artworks are beautiful. In the 1930s he restored La Conquistadora for the Archdiocese and also carved a replica. After several years in Brown County, Indiana, Baumann came to New Mexico and remained in Santa Fe until his death in 1971.

In 1914 Miller had platted a small addition on the north side of what was then called East Buena Vista Street. He produced oils and sculpture, created over sixty marionettes that provided the community with annual Christmas shows. He moved to Santa Fe in 1918 and spent the rest of his life there, producing a wealth of woodblock prints depicting the southwestern landscape and its people.

Gustave Baumann's Southwest (September 2007 edition)

I could and did, and much cheaper than the US version! He captured the spirit of his surroundings in a body of work that continues to be venerated for its personal imagery, singular style, and exacting technique. The eight sides of this room were created by adding a plane at each of the four corners and giving each a function—radiators in the southeast and southwest corners, a door on the northeast, and a fireplace on the northwest. Gustave Baumann 1881-1971 was born in Germany in 1881.

Gustave Baumann House — Historic Santa Fe Foundation

The colors seem accurate and it is nicely designed with great front and back covers. I came across this book in a bookshop in San Francisco and was really impressed with the wonderful, very colourful images of the US Southwest.
