Trojan Horse: A New Play

Although the Birmingham Street Commissioners took over the task of scavenging and removing obstacles from the roads within the urban area in 1769 the vestry remained responsible for the repair of existing roads until 1812. The greater part, however, of the scheme prepared by the commission between 1842 and 1845 was completed after 1852 by the council.

The outer walls remained standing, but the building was left unrepaired until the early 1960s when the new Bull Ring Shopping centre was built.

In more recent years quarrying of iron ore has been a major industry here, while the main local employer today is an interesting one: a Mercedes-Benz plant which supplies high-performance engines to the Mercedes, Williams and Racing Point Formula One teams.
