So we get in the car, and I try, as I had done several times through the years, to get my Great-Aunt Charlotte to open up about what it was like to live down there. Carpenter, who has made a special study of monkey groups, observed that intruding stringers were forcibly expelled, although he did see one persistent young male ultimately accepted by a group. The country was most affected around 1930—1932, when average farm incomes for a short time dipped below zero, and the peaked.
