CDC has developed a set of transportation recommendations that address all of the facets described above and has also developed a Transportation Health Impact Assessment Toolkit. Active transportation—the promotion of walking and cycling for transportation complemented by public transportation or any other active mode—is a form of transportation that reduces environmental barriers to physical activity and can improve health outcomes ;.

The Root Causes of Health Inequity

Among the barriers to access to care, the lack of culturally competent care can be a barrier for specific racial and ethnic groups who face stigma due to cultural norms. Displacement can occur as a direct result of a policy or program , because of recent development and property value increases in an area, or as a result of exclusion from a property for various reasons. Identifying implicit biases and acknowledging them is one of the most effective steps that can be taken to address their effects.
