Wildlife and Animal Activities for Children

Once you and your students have had some fun with chapter 1 and have started your naturalist's notebooks, chapter 2 provides a good framework for understanding the small worlds many of Earth's creatures inhabit. Have them use rulers for map measurements. You can do both by creating a naturalist's notebook.

PYP Resources

Tell the class that they will have an opportunity to take a closer look at the natural environment around their school.

. Cloud watching can take five minutes, be done almost anywhere where the sky can be seen and you have the right cloud cover and is a great way to use your imagination in nature.

24 of the Coolest Winter Science Experiments and Activities

What would you call one part of the whole? Older students will enjoy this winter science project, which tracks atmospheric conditions to find out how we get different types of snow.

Explore Natural Spaces

I often chuckled as I wrote these pieces and hope you do too. Morning and afternoon workshops will be held in-person outside and geared to preschool through third grade teachers, so invite your elementary teacher colleagues.
