La France en Chine, 1843

The main objective of this research blog is to open a broader forum of discussion on Tianjin modern history as well as the foreign concessions in China, focusing particularly on their land development issue and theirs attempts to expand the officially demarcated territory.

France en Chine La 1843

Starting in the early 1900s the French began to post gunboats on the Yangtze, focusing initially on expanding their influence and commercial penetration in China, and then later after 1907 moving to a more defensive posture of protecting their nationals and interests in the country.

LA FRANCE EN CHINE 1843

Part 2 moves onto French instruction and education efforts in China. Le problème politico-missionnaire au Sichuan 1898-1937 » in WEBER Jacques dir. Des archives diplomatiques et consulaires françaises permettent de redonner vie à ces cent années de péripéties de l'histoire de la Chine.

La France en Chine, 1843

The contrast of French and Anglo-Saxon approaches to the extension of their influence in China is an excellent feature. This would come to include in the early 1920s large numbers of Chinese ships that were officially under the French flag.
