At one stage between 1950 and 1958 the SAS had five squadrons deployed, A, B, D, the Independent Parachute Regiment Squadron 1955—57, and the New Zealand SAS Squadron 1955—57. If a man thinks he looks tough he will often be tough and, more important, act tough.

The Malayan Campaign 1948

A further blow came after news of the communist victory in China, which the British government subsequently recognized on January 6, 1950. For one, the British were applying large-scale conventional tactics that had been successful during World War II to an insurgency.

The Cold War's Legacies in Malaysia

Briggs had served in France, Mesopotamia, and Palestine during World War I and had commanded the Fifth Indian Division in Iraq and Burma during World War II, providing him with a firm grasp on jungle warfare. The Briggs Plan In early 1950, following recommendations from the British Defense Coordination Committee BDCC , a new civilian position was created at the request of High Commissioner Sir Henry Gurney and tasked with the coordination of civil, military, and police activities. Gaining approval for the new unit was a far easier task than raising the new organisation.
