The Pastoral Function of Ecclesiastical Museums

Place to store and protect what is no longer in use The art-historical patrimony not in regular use in a parish, put aside or left unprotected, can be adequately protected and presented in Church museums. The antiquarian party, on the other hand, are unanimous in holding that the vestments of the Christian Church were evolved, by a natural process, from the ordinary costume of a Roman citizen of the first or second century of our era. In quiet times the inside of the tower was a sheltered place in which to take a break during long watches.

The Pastoral Function of Ecclesiastical Museums

It is therefore extremely rare if not unknown for the girdle to be visible on mediaeval monuments, for even in those exceptional effigies in which the whole length of the alb is visible, the latter vestment entirely conceals the girdle by falling over it. Note, in this passage, the expression 'hung doubled. But the ribbons very early lost their usefulness and became simple ornaments, and the ubiquitous embroiderer was not long in seizing on these infulae, or lappets, and enriching them with needlework to the best of her ability.

Ecclesiastical Terminology

This insulated the monks from the distractions of the world and protected them from attack. The consciousness of all that was involved in this code of King of Kent c. Bishops wear the stole between the alb and tunicle pendent perpendicularly on either side of the breast; the pectoral cross which they wear is supposed to supply the place of the crossed stole.

Ecclesiastical Suicide

The horse was led up the church at the and presented at the altar rails. Very frequently this design was varied by omitting the part of the pectoral and dorsal bands above their intersection with the humeral; this resulted in the ' Y cross,' which we find in so many effigies in our cathedrals and churches.

A Memorial and Remonstrance by James Madison (1785)

See Fernanda Santos, Connecticut Episcopal Bishop Will Bless Gay Unions, N. Bagenals Castle was rediscovered during work being carried out at McCanns Bakery in Newry. For our present purpose it is sufficient to state that, with the empire in which it had been born and nurtured, the church was divided into two parts, which were thenceforth to develop independently, now in parallel, now in widely divergent lines.
