Talwin Morris (1865)

She began creating more natural exercises but realised also that a basic training was necessary. Among the champions of the Arts and Crafts movement, William Morris is arguably the most commemorated.

Talwin Morris (1865)

It was here that she met Lois Hutton in 1918, who became her second-in-command and principal dancer. By 1894 they were showing their work together in student exhibitions, some of which was made collaboratively.

Margaret Morris, drawings, designs and the Glasgow years (1985 edition)

For all of life involves changes, breaks, and sometimes abandoning people, and you suddenly find yourself on a rocky, thorny path where you feel pain and where you do not like yourself. She met Fergusson in Paris in 1913 and they became life partners but never married.

Margaret Morris (dancer)

The house was designed and built by Morris and his friend Phillip Webb, which would become Morris' first residential home. In 1913 she took a troupe to dance at the on the. Her major achievement was the system of movement she devised based on the six Classical Greek dance positions, and which she enshrined in the Margaret Morris Movement, which continues to this day.

The Glasgow Style

She won acclaim from the press as the first woman 'actor, manager' and the youngest, as she was only 21. Dance was one of the few areas during that period where women could develop their art without any dependence on men, especially if they ran their own theatres, which Morris, Hutton and Vanel did.

Margaret Macdonald

The Kelmscott Press With a production base of over 18000 volumes within its first 80 years of establishment, the Kelmscott Press is another piece of artwork for which Morris is celebrated today.

Rhythm & Colour: Dancing on the Edges

She opened a new theatre in the 1950s and kept in touch with Morris through letters and intermittent meetings. While some remember him for his pieces of poetry, many attribute the blueprint of garden suburbs and cities to the Morris' contributions to Arts and Crafts.

Margaret Morris (dancer)

She found that the body quickly responded to this precise systematic training and provide the students with strong lean toned bodies, increased thoracic capacity, bone density, mobility and heart rate.
