The apologists of capitalism, and their faithful echoes in the labour movement, try to comfort themselves with the thought that the collapse of the USSR signified the demise of socialism. A faith in the miraculous power of the peasant commune to bring about a social renaissance — a faith for which Chernyshevsky, as we have seen, was not entirely blameless — this faith played its part in heightening the enthusiasm and energy of the heroic Russian pioneers.

Marx on the Russian Mir, and misconceptions by Marxists

For these ladies and gentlemen ever since 1917 the Russian Revolution was a historical aberration. The Western socialist parties presumed that liberal political reforms and democratic rights like free speech and association would precede their success, and they therefore assumed as a matter of course that socialist parties would be mass parties like other political parties, and would have a democratic internal organization. Marxism

The German Social Democratic Party had grown by attracting voters in a country where the working class already had the suffrage. The locomotive of human progress is truth, not lies. The tactical implication of this philosophy was that socialist propaganda should be addressed primarily to the peasants, and when this was tried, it failed egregiously.

What the Russian Revolution achieved and why it degenerated

Consequently, the collapse of the USSR was the signal for an avalanche of propaganda against the achievements of the planned economies of Russia and Eastern Europe. Today Cuba, Laos and Vietnam are still officially considered communist states with their ruling parties holding Marxism-Leninism as their official ideology, giving their own different interpretations of the ideology.

But this much is certain: if a remnant of this commune is to be preserved, the first condition is the fall of tsarist despotism— revolution in Russia. Moreover, Marxism-Leninism became somewhat of a new religion to many, strictly following its rules as if they were holy commandments. Women and the October Revolution The great French utopian socialist Fourier saw the position of women as the most graphic indicator of the progress or otherwise of a social regime.

What the Russian Revolution achieved and why it degenerated

Maoists took these amendments as a new creative approach to the old ideology, naming the new-born ideological branch Marxism-Leninism-Maoism. Chautemps himself, differ from the present-day Soviet state not in substance, but only by a less efficient exploitation of the Marxist ideology.

List of Russian philosophers

The hatred of the Soviet Union shared by all those whose careers, salaries and profits derived from the existing order based on rent, interest and profit, is not hard to understand. The official propaganda was that the Soviet Union was moving inexorably towards the achievement of socialism. I regard it as the greatest single event in human history.
