If such, their fate, by thy divine control, O give them health and fortitude of soul! In a letter, dated 22d June 1750, Lochgarry informed the Prince, that having gone to Scotland the preceding winter to visit his wife and family, he had seen Cluny, whom he found the same person he always believed him, a true, worthy, good man, and, in a word, a man of loyalty and honour. Cluny had about six weeks previously been offered and had accepted the command of a company in Lord Loudon's Highlanders, but he was in reality a strong partisan of the Stuart dynasty. Charleston church, while on a visit to the Euhaw church, received an invitation to come over and help this feeble and destitute branch.
