Twenty-three urban districts had a population in excess of 10,000 and of these only five were located outside Glamorgan and Monmouthshire. Ellis, A History of Abergele and District Abergele, 1948 , t. And the third reason is, that in mastering his subject, he has become an authority, not only in that subject field, but also in all related fields.

The Cambrian, 1 May 1891, p. The overwhelming majority of the Monmouthshire-born residents were English speakers, and fewer than a quarter of this native population were able to speak the Welsh language.

Gales do Sul

The sixteen Irish natives resident in Ferndale, only one of whom was able to speak Welsh, showed a similar tendency to congregate in small groups. Although William Tongue, the manager of the works, was a Welsh-speaking native of the parish, only one of the other three Monmouthshire men who were employed as superintendents or foremen at the tinplate works were also proficient in the Welsh language. As Table 8 shows, the majority of the boarders and lodgers of Ferndale hailed from the predominantly agricultural districts of Wales and England.
