Removing Barriers to Health Care: A Guide for Health Professionals

Inquiries about her entire psychiatric history or about the details of her therapy sessions would, for example, exceed this limited scope. ADA Title I: Employment Title I requires employers with 15 or more employees to provide qualified individuals with disabilities an equal opportunity to benefit from the full range of employment-related opportunities available to others.

As a result, it may be critical for the employer to initiate a conversation with a veteran who is experiencing problems to determine an appropriate accommodation. This includes accessible common use areas, doors that are wide enough for wheelchairs, kitchens and bathrooms that allow a person using a wheelchair to maneuver, and other adaptable features within the units. It would be important to ask Ms.

In addition, providers should plan for additional time during examinations, if needed. Title I of the ADA prohibits an employer from treating an applicant or employee unfavorably in all aspects of employment—including hiring, promotions, job assignments, training, termination, and any other terms, conditions, and privileges of employment—because he or she has a disability, a history of having a disability, or because the employer regards him as having a disability. The history and physical examination must be provided as a narrative of the findings.

However, individuals who are not currently engaging in the illegal use of drugs and who are participating in, or have successfully completed, a supervised drug rehabilitation program or who have otherwise been successfully rehabilitated may be covered by the ADA. May someone other than the employee request a reasonable accommodation on behalf of an individual with a disability? There also are extensive public and private resources to help employers identify reasonable accommodations for employees with particular disabilities.
