Edward Vernon: My Cousin's Story by Edward Vernon Childe · public-docs.talentcoach.ir.au

As five o'clock instead of three--the time fixed for our departure--was now near at hand, I was exceedingly angry at a self-indulgence which could thus dally with precious minutes, above all when the comfort, if not the lives, of women were in question, and I consequently expressed myself in very unmeasured terms. It was a black and blusterous night, and as my room was on the windward side of the house, where I heard the rain and sleet beating furiously against the windows, I could not but congratulate myself on being so well sheltered from the storm. This historic book may have numerous typos, missing text or index.
