Geography under the Royal Society. While filling that responsible post, during a most anxious and difficult period, he never lost sight of the interests of our Society, and was ever ready to extend the most cordial assistance and encouragement to explorers of all nations.

THE GEOGRAPHICAL JOURNAL 1925

Hamilton shone out as the most powerful comparative geographer, and his hearers felt the true value of the application of his learning. The Society was also pivotal in establishing Geography as a teaching and research discipline in British universities, and funded the first Geography positions in the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge. The Gold Medal was bestowed on Professor Middendorff in 1846, for his remarkable travels in northern Siberia, and for having reached the great headland of Taimyr.

THE GEOGRAPHICAL JOURNAL 1925

Francis Galton earned the Gold Medal in 1853 for having, as already mentioned, fitted out an expedition to explore the interior of South Africa at his own cost, and for having successfully conducted it through the country of the Damaras and the Ovampo, a journey of upwards of 2000 miles.

John Crawfurd

He attributed it to the weakness of Indian financial institutions, compared to Europe. Crawfurd unsuccessfully contested, as an advanced radical, in 1832, in 1834, in 1835, and in 1837.

Promoting geodiversity: learning lessons from biodiversity

It also publishes other magazines, books, school products, maps, and Web and film products in numerous languages and countries. Of statesmen there were Lord Althorp and Sir George Murray.
