Add a title and any other forms of display text that you feel would be appropriate. In particular, consider if your reader is likely to compare either rows or columns — these kinds of tables need extra attention owing to the way they are used.

These arrangements will in turn create groupings as well as imply hierarchy of information. Centered text can also be commonly found on signs, flyers, and similar documents where grabbing the attention of the reader is the main focus, or visual appearance is important and the overall amount of centered text is small.
